THE PICKERTS.

The Four Pickerts and their company of comedians gave a very creditable performance of "Rip Van Winkle" at the Grand last night. The specialty work of the Pickerts is very clean, indeed, and made a hit. Baby Blanche amply upheld her claim of being the greatest of child actresses. Mr. Jos. C. Morton as "Rip" deserves special mention. To-night the bill will be "A Noble Outcast." A special matinee will be given Wednesday afternoon at 2:30, at which time a straight vaudeville bill will be presented,
and Baby Blanche will hold a reception.
Wednesday night the engagement will close with "Wildcat, the Romp."

EXQUISITE MUSIC.

The bandmen of the Gordon Highlanders "The Kilties," who will appear at the Grand on April 14, for a matinee performance only, have always given due prominence on their programmes to the work of the great masters, and are equally at home in performing the less pretentious compositions of the popular writers but they chiefly excel in their own peculiar national music, that of Scotland and no son of "Old Scotia" ever misses the opportunity of hearing the famous Highlanders' Band in patriotic music so dear to the hearts of a John Tammen's bairns. It is unnecessary to refer to the exquisite musical beauty of Scottish airs and the manner in which they appeal to all. Suffice it to say that the faithful interpretation of Scottish music by the Gordon Highlanders is a near perfection as anything musical can be.

HANDY COMBINATION.

Corn Crib and Wagon Shed Under One Roof Suits Man Who Has Used It for Years.

The main building is 20x30 feet with an 11-foot driveway through the middle the long way, and 9 feet to the second floor. The cribs are 4 feet 6 inches wide, 30 feet long and 9 feet high, with one somewhat shorter, to allow for stairway to the second floor. Capacity about 1,100 bushels. Next to the driveway the cribs are sided with lath to give air circulation. The second floor is 5 feet in height at the eaves,

which is sufficiently high to allow a wheat or oats bin the whole length of one side and about half of the other, the balance providing for the stairway. The remainder of the space may be used to suit the taste of the owner. I have two extra bins at one end and the remainder makes a fine workshop. A trapdoor with a pulley and rope makes a convenient way of elevating the grain. The floor is of oak, surfaced and matched.

The frame is of 8x8 timber, with 6x6 joists over the driveway; sided with surfaced oak lumber and has a double lap slate roof. It has a foundation of stone pillars, but I think sewer pipe preferable, being cheaper, ratproof, and, if filled with concrete, practically indestructible.

The wagon and machine shed is 10x30, shedded against one side of the crib. Balloon frame, sided with hard pine and roofed with felt, the slope not being sufficient for slate. A cistern occupies one corner, while all the rest is available for storing farm implements. A small door is in one end while the other is a full width door hung on rollers, the end of the crib making a place for the track. The eastern while not really necessary is a very convenient place to store water for a dry time or for use in washing the express wagon or buggy. Do not build the wagon-shed too small, as no matter how large it is it is nearly always filled to running over.

As the above building was erected before I bought the farm, I cannot give the exact cost of same. But knowing the cost of lumber and other material in his neighborhood, your inquirer can figure the cost for himself. —A. E. Swayne, in Ohio Farmer.

HELPFUL FARM HINTS.

Success to the jolly old farmer who sings as he follows his plow.

Begin right, direct your work right and your bank account will be right.

The manure wagon is a necessary evil; don't let it be more evil than necessary.

Cutting wood when your corn needs plowing? A cog is slipped somewhere in your anatomy.

A hole in the feed bin big enough to admit a rat should be enlarged to admit a cat. A tin lining is better.

Nothing new can be said of the flaxseed market, which has been practically lifeless for two months, under one of fair steadiness.

To renovate a prairie pasture, take off the stock, scratch the surface early in spring with a disk or other harrow, and leave to itself for the season.

Soaking seed oats one hour in a solution of four and one-half ounces commercial formalin to ten gallons of water, has uniformly prevented loss from this disease in experiment station tests.

Cutworms cannot endure freezing and thawing. Plow any infested ground just as soon as the plow can be got into the soil. Subsequent freezing and thawing will fix 'em.—Farm and Home.

How to Supply Nitrogen.

Nitrogen is the one element that is lacking in most soils and it can be grown or trapped by planting some leguminous crop and leaving it on the ground for humus, thereby making the other unavailable elements available for the growing plants, by decomposition, disintegration, letting in the air and water which it holds like a sponge and giving the worms and micro-organisms a chance to do what nature intended they should.—Farmers' Voice.

LACK OF FOREIGN TONGUES.

American Women as a Rule Do Not Acquire a Knowledge of Other Languages.

A serious defect to the education of most American women is their failure to acquire in their youth conversational facility in other languages than their own. Many girls include a foreign tongue or two in the list of their studies, but it is simply eye skill that they secure, ability to read and write the language with varying degrees of excellence. When the ear test comes it is the exception when they are not almost helpless, says Harper's Bazar. An English girl is not considered educated until she is fluent in at least one other than her native language, and she often speaks two or three easily. A trip abroad illustrates and emphasizes the fact that Americans are very provincial in the matter of languages. In a group of foreigners taken at random, German, French and Italian, together with English, one of the hardest tongues to learn, will be heard interchangeable among its members; it is not until an American joins the group that the talk through courtesy to his or her limitations, becomes restricted to English. In Sweden, French, German and English are obligatory studies in the curricula. The kindergarten children are taught the language in delightful fashions, the girls with their dolls and kitchen-garden classes, the boys with games and sports and the like.

MAKING CANES TO ORDER.

Demands Made Upon Workmen by Changes of Fashions in Walking Sticks.

"Fashions change in canes, as they do in everything else," said a manufacturer who knows all about the fashionable trade up town, says the New York Times. "Last year our customers were calling for rough wood in its natural state, without any ornamentation. They wanted canes made almost as thin and as light as whangees. So many cheap imitations had been made of silver-mounted smooth-wood canes that men of fashion would not look at them. This year we are returning to silver mounts, but in designs made to order that it will be almost out of the question for importers of cheap German silver to imitate. In umbrellas the handles of rough wood still hold favor with the men. It is no longer fashionable to decorate them with initials. A man likes an umbrella that he can pick out at sight from a bunch of others at his club or elsewhere. Some men will have the crooked handle so that they can hang their umbrellas on a hook in a hat rack, and we have to manufacture a few of them to meet the demands of the trade. Women always go in for something odd, and usually expensive."

WANT WAXED PAPER-BAGS.

Customers of the Grocer Insist Upon Having Their Purchases Put Up in Them.

"I should like to get my hands on the man who began to line the ordinary paper bag of commerce with waxed paper," said an up-town grocer, reports the New York Times. "Women will not have their orders sent home in anything else now. The coarse brown paper bags that our mothers used to get are almost out of business. If a woman wants to keep a thing dry she asks to have it sent in a waxed paper bag. If she wants to keep it moist she also wants a waxed paper bag. Tea and coffee go into waxed paper to keep them dry and fresh. A nice head of lettuce calls for waxed paper to keep it moist. Cakes, candies and confectionery of all sorts must be put in wax paper bags. Sugar and flour are about the only things for which we can use the old-fashioned bags. It was once only a fad in the trade, calculated to please somewhat fastidious customers who wanted to carry a small parcel home without soiling their gloves. Now it is a demand in the business, even for delivery orders."

The "Fex" Trade.

Until a comparatively few years ago Fex, the capital of Morocco, had practically a monopoly in the manufacture of the Turkish national headress named after it—the "fex"—as it was supposed that the peculiar dull crimson color of the tasseled skull cap could only be obtained by using the dye made from a certain berry largely grown in the neighborhood of the city, which is also much used in the dyeing of morocco leather. Now, however, France and Turkey, and to a certain extent Austria, actively compete with Fex for what is still a very lucrative trade.

Dollar for a Senate Seat.

Senator Pettus, of Alabama, the other day disproved the prevailing theory that all seats in the United States senate are expensive and that that body is altogether a millionaire's club. He sent to the secretary of state of Alabama the sum of one dollar in a postal note to cover the entire expenses for his recent unanimous election. This sum represents the fee of the secretary of state for his services. So far as known this is a record in the minimum price for seats in the senate.

Growth of Wireless Telegraphy.

Seventy-one patents covering apparatus for wireless telegraphy were issued in the United States last year, making the total number 109.

Low Colonist Rates to the Northwest and California.

From February 15th until April 30th, the Burlington makes greatly reduced one-way rates for settlers going to California, Montana, Big Horn Basin, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, Puget Sound Country and British Columbia. Generally speaking, the reduction is from 25 to 40 per cent.

The Way To Go.

Take Burlington trains at St. Louis, Kansas City, St. Joseph, Omaha, Denver or Chicago. With its close connections, the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads, and with its through train service the Burlington offers more to the settler than any other line or combination of lines into the Northwest. The "Burlington-Northern Pacific Express" is the great daily train with through chairs, cars, coaches and through tourist sleepers. This is the only through train in the Northwest jointly with the Northern Pacific Road.

To California.

Join the Burlington's personally conducted California excursions in through tourist sleepers which are run on frequent dates each week via Denver, scenic Colorado and Salt Lake City.

Main Traveled Road.

One makes no mistake in calling for tickets over the Burlington with its 5,000 miles of main traveled trunk lines leading to practically all the great cities and diverging points of the West.

HANDY COMBINATION.

Corn Crib and Wagon Shed Under One Roof Suits Man Who Has Used It for Years.

The main building is 20x30 feet with an 11-foot driveway through the middle the long way, and 9 feet to the second floor. The cribs are 4 feet 6 inches wide, 30 feet long and 9 feet high, with one somewhat shorter, to allow for stairway to the second floor. Capacity about 1,100 bushels. Next to the driveway the cribs are sided with lath to give air circulation. The second floor is 5 feet in height at the eaves.

PLAN OF GROUND FLOOR.

which is sufficiently high to allow a wheat or oats bin the whole length of one side and about half of the other, the balance providing for the stairway. The remainder of the space may be used to suit the taste of the owner. I have two extra bins at one end and the remainder makes a fine workshop. A trapdoor with a pulley and rope makes a convenient way of elevating the grain. The floor is of oak, surfaced and matched.

The frame is of 8x8 timber, with 6x6 joists over the driveway; sided with surfaced oak lumber and has a double lap plate roof. It has a foundation of stone pillars, but I think sewer pipe preferable, being cheaper, ratproof, and, if filled with concrete, practically indestructible.

The wagon and machine shed is 10x30, shedded against one side of the crib. Balloon frame, sided with hard pine and roofed with felt, the slope not being sufficient for slate. A cistern occupies one corner, while all the rest is available for storing farm implements. A small door is in one end while the other is a full width door hung on rollers, the end of the crib making a place for the track. The cistern while not really necessary is a very convenient place to store water for a dry time or for use in washing the express wagon or buggy. Do not build the wagon-shed too small, as no matter how large it is it is nearly always filled to running over.

As the above building was erected before I bought the farm, I cannot give the exact cost of same. But knowing the cost of lumber and other material in his neighborhood, your inquirer can figure the cost for himself. —A. E. Swayne, in Ohio Farmer.

HELPFUL FARM HINTS.

Success to the jolly old farmer who sings as he follows his plow.

Begin right, direct your work right and your bank account will be right. The manure wagon is a necessary evil; don't let it be more evil than necessary.

Cutting wood when your corn needs plowing? A cog is slipped somewhere in your anatomy.

A hole in the feed bin big enough to admit a rat should be enlarged to admit a cat. A tin lining is better.

Nothing new can be said of the flaxseed market, which has been practically lifeless for two months, undertake one of fair steadiness.

To renovate a prairie pasture, take off the stock, scratch the surface early in spring with a disk or other harrow, and leave to itself for the season.

Soaking seed oats one hour in a solution of four and one-half ounces commercial formalin to ten gallons of water, has uniformly prevented loss from this disease in experiment station tests.

Outworn cannot endure freezing and thawing. Plow any infested ground just as soon as the plow can be got into the soil. Subsequent freezing and thawing will fix 'em.—Farm and Home.

How to Supply Nitrogen.

Nitrogen is the one element that is lacking in most soils and it can be grown or trapped by planting some leguminous crop and leaving it on the ground for humus, thereby making the other unavailable elements available for the growing plants, by decomposition, disintegration, letting in the air and water which it holds like a sponge and giving the worms and micro-organisms a chance to do what nature intended they should.—Farmers' Voice.

LACK OF FOREIGN TONGUES.

American Women as a Rule Do Not Acquire a Knowledge of Other Languages.

A serious defect to the education of most American women is their failure to acquire in their youth conversational facility in other languages than their own. Many girls include a foreign tongue or two in the list of their studies, but it is simply eye skill that they secure, ability to read and write the language with varying degrees of excellence. When the ear test comes it is the exception when they are not almost helpless, says Harper's Bazar. An English girl is not considered educated until she is fluent in at least one other than her native language, and she often speaks two or three easily. A trip abroad illustrates and emphasizes the fact that Americans are very provincial in the matter of languages. In a group of foreigners taken at random, German, French and Italian, together with English, one of the hardest tongues to learn, will be heard interchangeable among its members; it is not until an American joins the group that the talk through courtesy to his or her limitations, becomes restricted to English. In Sweden, French, German and English are obligatory studies in the curricula. The kindergarten children are taught the language in delightful fashions, the girls with their dolls and kitchen-garden classes, the boys with games and sports and the like.

MAKING CANES TO ORDER.

Demands Made Upon Workmen by Changes of Fashions in Walking Sticks.

"Fashions change in canes, as they do in everything else," said a manufacturer who knows all about the fashionable trade up town, says the New York Times. "Last year our customers were calling for rough wood in its natural state, without any ornamentation. They wanted canes made almost as thin and as light as whangees. So many cheap imitations had been made of silver-mounted, smooth-wood canes that men of fashion would not look at them. This year we are returning to silver mounts, but in designs made to order that it will be almost out of the question for importers of cheap German silver to imitate. In umbrellas the handles of rough wood still hold favor with the men. It is no longer fashionable to decorate them with initials. A man likes an umbrella that he can pick out at sight from a bunch of others at his club or elsewhere. Some men will have the crooked handle so that they can hang their umbrellas on a hook in a hat rack, and we have to manufacture a few of them to meet the demands of the trade. Women always go in for something odd, and usually expensive."

WANT WAXED PAPER-BAGS.

Customers of the Grocer Insist Upon Having Their Purchases Put Up in Them.

"I should like to get my hands on the man who began to line the ordinary paper bag of commerce with waxed paper," said an up-town grocer, reports the New York Times. "Women will not have their orders sent home in anything else now. The coarse brown paper bags that our mothers used to get are almost out of business. If a woman wants to keep a thing dry she asks to have it sent in a waxed paper bag. If she wants to keep it moist she also wants a waxed paper bag. Tea and coffee go into waxed paper to keep them dry and fresh. A nice head of lettuce calls for waxed paper to keep it moist. Cakes, candies and confectionery of all sorts must be put in wax paper bags. Sugar and flour are about the only things for which we can use the old-fashioned bags. It was once only a fad in the trade, calculated to please somewhat fastidious customers who wanted to carry a small parcel home without soiling their gloves. Now it is a demand in the business, even for delivery orders."

The "Faz" Trade.

Until a comparatively few years ago Fez, the capital of Morocco, had practically a monopoly in the manufacture of the Turkish national headress named after it—the "fez"—as it was supposed that the peculiar dull crimson color of the tasseled skull cap could only be obtained by using the dye made from a certain berry largely grown in the neighborhood of the city, which is also much used in the dyeing of morocco leather. Now, however, France and Turkey, and to a certain extent Austria, actively compete with Fez for what is still a very lucrative trade.

Dollar for a Senate Seat.

Senator Pettus, of Alabama, the other day disproved the prevailing theory that all seats in the United States senate are expensive and that that body is altogether a millionaire's club. He sent to the secretary of state of Alabama the sum of one dollar in a postal note to cover the entire expenses for his recent unanimous election. This sum represents the fee of the secretary of state for his services. So far as known this is a record in the minimum price for seats in the senate.

Growth of Wireless Telegraphy.

Seventy-one patents covering apparatus for wireless telegraphy were issued in the United States last year, making the total number 109.

—At Winchester R. D. Hunter and son sold to W. M. Robb 160 lambs, delivered June 20, at 6c. H. G. Bush sold to same 60 lambs delivery June 16, at 6 cents.

—R. L. Walker, who is one of Jesse's most practical and successful farmers, made perhaps the best average from his hemp crop that was made in the county. On twenty acres he raised 26,000 pounds of hemp; ten acres of this averaged 1400 pounds to the acre. The secret of Mr. Walker's success perhaps in hemp raising, is due to his early sowing, which is about April 1st, when the average farmer sows a month later. The early sowing gives the hemp the start of the cut worm and also the advantage of the dry weather. If there is a farmer in Central Kentucky that beats this yield, let's hear from him. —Nicholasville Journal.

—Reports from all sections indicate that winter wheat is in very promising condition generally. The crop has wintered well, and is now making vigorous growth in all sections. A rank growth is reported from limited areas in Kentucky, and some damage by water on lowlands in Maryland and the lower Ohio and Central Mississippi valleys. Some spring wheat has been sown in Washington, but no seeding has been done in principal spring wheat States, the soil being too wet for preparatory work.

—A correspondent asks if nest eggs are a necessity, and if hens will lay as well without them as with them. We have never found the nest egg to be of any special benefit. In a row of nest we have used nest eggs in some and none in others, and the hens would lay just as well in the nests without eggs as those with them. There was a great many things recommended in many of the poultry papers that are superfluous. —Farmers' Home Journal.

—A herd of Hereford cattle on the stock farm of Wm. L. Graddy, near Versailles, has been attracting considerable interest by their peculiar habit of sitting upright on their haunches like dogs—a thing that is almost unheard of among bovines. When Mr. Graddy wrote of this peculiar trait of his herd to some prominent cattle breeders in other States they ridiculed the assertion, and so he had a photograph taken verifying his statement.

The Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Association met in Lexington on March 26th with an attendance representing over thirty counties. There were also present many representative farmers and tobacco growers interested in the movement. The meeting was called to order about two o'clock by Vice-President W. B. Hawkins, who made report to the Association that five counties had been organized since the last meeting.

Reports from the several counties were received as to the progress of the work, and various committees made reports.

The most important business transacted at the meeting was the formation of a set of by-laws for the government of the organization in its business matters. Mr. E. E. Barton, chairman of the committee appointed at a previous meeting, presented a set of by-laws drafted by the committee, and after being discussed, and with a few amendments, they were approved and recommended for official adoption. Among other things they provided that there shall be a Board of Control in each county consisting of six members, three selected by the tobacco growers and three by the company, and two inspectors to grade the tobacco, one selected by the tobacco growers and one by the company, and in case of a disagreement or complaint the matter to be adjusted by the County Board of Control.

Steps were taken to organize the remaining five or six counties in the Burley district and to have them present and represented at the next meeting, which will be in Lexington on April 30th. The Association has not given out a statement of the number of subscribers to the agreement, but at the close of the meeting Mr. C. M. Dean, the Secretary, stated that he believed they had enough subscribers to commence business, that the success of the movement was an assured fact, and that they will handle the next crop.

OPEN-HEARTED PEOPLE.

Travelers in Shetland Are Always Well Treated by the Hospitable Natives.

In the Shetlands one is always welcome to rest by the fire and a cup of bland-fermented buttermilk whey—and, except where the people are exceedingly poor, tea with scones or biscuit is usually offered. Kindly and open-hearted as the people are, the slightest breach of patronage or condescension puts them into a state of proud reserve that is not easily broken. They will confer any number of favors; to accept them is always a little difficult, says the Detroit Free Press.

They live in a most patriarchal manner—three or four generations in one house. The younger men are usually sailors or fishermen; the elder men and the women manage the croft. As plows are unknown, they "dell" the ground with spades before sowing their little crops of oats and barley. The hay and grain are cut sometimes with a scythe quite often with a small sickle—methods that involve hard labor even on a croft of from two to four acres. The drying hay is protected from the wind by condemned herring nets and is carried to the stack in rope creels. Peats are cut in the spring and dried all summer out on the moors and carried home in keshies (baskets) of straw or dock slung across the shoulders. The women bring home most of the peats and are commonly to be met with bent under towers several feet high, but often singing and always knitting.

COUNTING COINS QUICKLY.

The Ingenious Invention of a Treasury Expert Facilitates the Handling Thereof.

An old treasury employe has invented an ingenious coin counting machine. It consists of a round metal hopper into which coins are poured. From this the coins are fed into an attachment, or head, as it is called, which is kept constantly revolving by a crank operated by hand. Each revolution carries six or more coins through a registering device which keeps track of the exact number. There is a different-sized head for each coin and the change from nickels to pennies or from dimes to quarters or coins of larger denomination can be made instantly. It is estimated that with one of these machines a strong boy can accurately perform the work of five or six clerks, says a Washington report. A device has also been planned which will count the coins in 100 or 200 lots and by the use of a paper carton they may be done up in packages ready for handling or shipment. By running them consecutively through the various heads a lot of coins may be separated and counted at the same time. The machine is expected to revolutionize coin counting methods.

GERMANS AT THE CIRCUS.

Reduce Receipts by Their Bulk of Body in Taking Up the Seats.

One of the bets stories of the Barnum European trip grew out of the German experience. Opinion differs as to whether the joke is at the expense of the Germans or of the circus itself. On crossing the German frontier, the management discovered a startling shortage in the daily receipts. The circus as usual was playing "to capacity," the 10,000 odd seats were filled twice daily, and hundreds were being turned away, yet the shortage was something like $1,000 a day, says the Woman's Home Companion. Expert accountants went over the books in vain, detectives were brought from Paris, but could discover nothing. Finally, after much investigation, it was found that every German occupied about a seat and a fourth, or that three able-bodied men or women completely filled four regular seats. The receipts were by the same percentage less than they should have been. Here was a substantial difficulty which could not be overcome.

No American Face.

A writer in London Health says that in no sense of the word is the American face distinctive, and there is nothing that will call it up in the mind from the world's group of Caucasian faces. The answer to this is that the American face is a composite, necessarily.

FAIR APPROPRIATIONS

Made by Different States Nearly Four Millions.

ELABORATE DISPLAYS TO BE MADE.

Real Value of All Will Be Over $10,000,000—Legislature Failed to Add Kentucky, But She Will Be More Adequately Represented Than If It Had.

Appropriations for state buildings and exhibits at the World's Fair, St. Louis, in 1904, at the present date amount to $3,935,500. To this sum may be added $1,754,500 in hand or being raised from other sources. Bills are pending in the legislatures of sixteen states, aggregating $1,427,000. Of these bills all are reasonably sure of passing, making a grand total of $7,167,000 to be expended in showing to the world the industries and resources of the different sections of this country. The legislatures of twelve other states will convene in time to supplement this total and increase it many thousands of dollars. Many states have exhibits already collected worth thousands of dollars, which have been used at former expositions and others that belong to individuals. These are not included in the total. The real value of state exhibits at a very conservative estimate will be over $10,000,000. The total amount expended for state exhibits at the World's Columbian Exposition at Chicago in 1893 was $5,250,000. Many states are showing great activity in the collecting of their exhibits, among the foremost of which is Kentucky. Kentucky's legislature failed to make an appropriation, but she will have a representation at the exposition that will surpass the states with appropriations, if her citizens subscribe as they should to the Kentucky Exhibit association fund.

SPENDING THE FUND.

Every Cent Goes Into Kentucky Building and Exhibits at Fair.

One of the latest folders issued by the Kentucky Exhibit association outlines in brief paragraphs what the funds of the association are to be spent for. These are enumerated as follows: A State building; mineral exhibit, occupying 6,000 square feet of space; agricultural exhibit, occupying 5,000 square feet of space; horticultural exhibit, occupying 3,000 square feet of space; tobacco exhibit, occupying 5,000 square feet of space, out of a total of 10,000 to be given to all tobacco; forestry exhibit, occupying 3,000 square feet of space; educational exhibit, occupying 2,500 square feet of space.

In addition to this, the association is to encourage and stimulate exhibits in live stock, manufactures, whisky, fine arts, liberal arts and all other departments of the exposition. The space for these exhibits is many times as much as Kentucky had at the Chicago World's Fair, and they are to be on a more thorough and extensive scale than was ever attempted before.

A BUTTON OF SEVEN COLORS.

The Kentucky building to be erected at the St. Louis World's fair has been shown in divers shapes and sizes, but at no time more attractively than on the souvenir button which the Kentucky Exhibit association has placed on sale, with the hope of adding many hundred dollars to its fund for a proper representation of the state at St. Louis. The cut of the button herewith is actual size, but it does not do the souvenir half justice. It is one of these things that must be seen to be appreciated. One and a fourth inches in diameter, it has seven distinct colors in its design—building in purple, sky in gold, lawn in blue grass, foliage of green, walks in gray, lettering in brown and black. The buttons have had a splendid sale so far and every indication points to the entire issue of 25,000 being exhausted.

EVERYBODY GIVEN A VOTE.

Many a woman has wanted to exercise the right of franchise and every youth awaits impatiently the ending of his minority. In the school teachers' popularity contest of the Kentucky Exhibit association neither sex nor age cuts a figure in the qualifications of a voter. Every woman in the state, every child in the state—boy or girl—as well as every man in the state, is entitled to vote "not only early, but often." In fact, the Exhibit association is anxious to have the ballot box "stuffed." The counting is to be under the supervision of a committee, the honesty of which can not be questioned. Therefore, fairness is assured. Let everybody cast at least one vote in this contest.

The installation of the first exhibit of the World's fair was begun recently. It is the large Duerr boiler sent to St. Louis by the Daesseldorf-Rating Rohrenkessel Fabrik of Germany. This boiler will do service in lighting the Liberal Arts building and the grounds during the dedication ceremonies.

Two Kinds of a Wag.
In an Iowa law court an attorney was arguing with great earnestness and eloquence. In the midst of his argument he paused a moment.
"I see your honor shakes his head at that statement. I desire to reaffirm it, although your honor dis-sents."

"I have not intimated," replied the judge, "how I should construe the evidence or what my decision will be in the case, and your remark is uncalled for."
"You shook your head."
"That may be true," the court replied. "There was a fly on my ear, and I reserved the right to remove it in any manner I saw fit. Proceed with your argument."—Green Bag.

A NOTICE

The women of Central Kentucky have been led to expect much from Kaufman, Straus & Co. in the matter of Tailor-Made Dresses—and rightly.

We have taught our public to look for lavish variety in Fine, Ready-to-Wear Garments. This season, we, ourselves, are astonished at the assemblage presented. Perhaps we have been carried too far by our enthusiasm over the fine things we have found.

In order to introduce these goods speedily and effectively, we have decided to offer them below their actual value at the very beginning of this season, and thus get our patrons to judge for themselves of the superiority of these fine goods.

The Suits and Dresses we are showing represent the very newest and swellest designs; none of them in the house over ten days, yet they will be reduced to the following prices:

$37 50 and 32 50	$35 00 Suits will be Sold at $30 00
27 50 and 25 00	Suits will be Sold at 25 00
22 50 and 20 00	Suits will be Sold at 17 50
18 00 and 17 50	Suits will be Sold at 15 00
16 50 and 15 00	Suits will be Sold at 13 50

The colors are Black, Navy, Royal, Brown and Mixtures. The materials are Cheviots, Cloths, Etamines, Mistrals and Veilings. Sizes from 32 to 40. Misses' sizes 14 and 16 years; small-sized ladies can also be fitted from these sizes.

When alterations are necessary, every garment will be made to fit in our own attractive department.

GOOD BUSINESS.—A large crowd attended the millinery openings in this city Saturday. All the milliners report a fine business and it is well that they did do a nice business for you can buy no finer millinery anywhere than you can right in Paris, and the ladies should patronize the home firms.

To Protect Animals.

S. E. BORLAND has been appointed agent in this city for the society of "The Prevention of Cruelty to Animals." This is something that Paris has needed for a long while, and if Mr. Borland will do his duty which, no doubt he will, it will prove to be a good thing, as you can see on the streets—very day poor horses and mules that are hardly able to walk being made to do work of a robust animal.

COMMISSIONER OF AGRICULTURE.
We are authorized to announce T. T.
HEDGER as a candidate for Commissioner of Agriculture, subject to the will of the Democratic Party. Primary May 9th, 1903.

JUDGE J. E. CANTRILL has returned from Florida and is at his home in Georgetown.

MUSICAL CLUB.—Saturday will be the last meeting day of the Musical Study Club. The club will meet with Mrs.
D. C. Parish. All members are requested to be present.

Elizabeth Fossitt, the two-year-old daughter of H. K. Fossitt, died of infection of the brain on Sunday. The child was buried in Falmouth yesterday.

The several local societies of young people of the city will hold services at the jail Sunday afternoon. They will meet at the Baptist Church at 2:30 o'clock.

KENTUCKY, being out of debt through the war claim windfall, should celebrate extensively by a creditable exhibition of the State's resources at the World's Fair.

The site of the St. Louis Exposition covers 1,200 acres, or nearly two square miles, so the sight seer will have to cover a good deal of ground to see all the sights.

EUROPEAN immigrants are arriving at the rate of 75,000 per month. This is at the rate of 900,000 per year, but this is a great country and can readily assimilate them if they are of the right stripe.

CAPT. JOHN RUSSELL, who was Wednesday appointed Collector of Customs at Natchez, Miss., is a one-armed Confederate Veteran and a Democrat. L.
J. Winston, who resigned the office, is a negro attorney.

THE President started from Washington Wednesday morning on his tour of the West. A special train of six cars carried the party on the 14,000-mile trip. Nine weeks and three days will be required for the journey.

ATTORNEY JOHN W. RAY, counsel for the opponents of Gov. Beckham in the eligibility case and of the committee in the primary election matter, Saturday filed in the Clerk's office of the Appellate Court a petition for a rehearing. It will be disposed of the week of April 13.

SEVERAL papers are advising Gov.
Beckham to withdraw his candidacy, but none of them were very friendly to him and a majority of them at least did not support Gov. Goebel. Their advice is neither sought nor will it be taken. The governor will follow the old adage: Find out what your enemy wants you to do and then do the contrary.
—Lexington Democrat.

Gov. BECKHAM can stay right in Frankfort attending to his business and beat his opponents for the nomination.
He does not have to make speeches.
His record is speaking for him all over the State. Stay at home, Governor, and continue to burn bonds and do other worthy deeds and you will be like Eclipse in the race, that is to say first and the rest nowhere.

JUDGE MURPHY, of Buffalo, Wednesday issued a statement at the conclusion of the Burdick inquest, practically charging Arthur R. Pennell with the murder of Edwin L. Burdick. He declared Pennell had a stronger motive than any one else for putting Burdick out of the way.

ON his return to Washington, Mr.
John W. Yerkes informed a waiting world that "Republican prospects in Kentucky have been greatly improved on account of the dissensions in the Democratic ranks." Mr. Yerkes is mistaken. There are no dissensions in the Democratic ranks to speak of, and if they were ten times greater than they are it would not improve Republican chances. The man isn't living that will see another Republican desecrating the Executive building. Yerkes' man Taylor queried the game for all time.—Lexington Democrat.

SMALL-POX IN SCOTT.—The smallpox which has given Scott county so much trouble has made its appearance in the Newtown neighborhood. Four or five cases have developed. Health officers,
Dr. R. L. Carrick, Dr. John A. Tevis,
Jr., and Dr. Pack went to Newtown
Saturday and ordered the school dismissed and also ordered that no religious or other assemblies be held until further notice.

NO THANKS.—Editor Heber Matthews, of the Hartford Herald, discussing the newspaper profession, says, among other things: "There is no profession on earth whose members say as many good things about people and receive as few kind words of appreciation in return, as editors. No man sees more of the ingratitude of life than the newspaper man. Sometimes he finds that those who should be his best friends are the first to speak disparagingly about him or his paper behind his back."

A MEASLEY SHAME.—Saloshin & Co.'s large show window which has been so artistically decorated with five bottled whiskies, brandies, wines, etc., yesterday met with a sad mishap. The bottled goods were arranged on shelving and a bottle of Sweet Catawba on the top shelf got a whiff of that fine old Sant Clay and toppled over and in the wind-up it struck the bottom accompanied by about fifty other bottles, which were broken into a thousand pieces, and wasting enough liquor to get a cod-sized court day crowd comfortably drunk. This is the second time that this particular wind has met it with the same mishap.

CROCODILE'S DENTIST.

Species of Plover That Removes Parasites from the Reptile's Mouth Unmolested.

"I wish we had a crocodile plover here. It would amuse the children," said John Lover, a keeper at the Zoo, according to the Philadelphia Record. "What kind of a bird is a crocodile plover?" some one asked.

"It's the crocodile's dentist," Lover replied. "It keeps the crocodile's mouth in good condition."

"The crocodile," he went on, "is much annoyed by a parasitic insect that enters his mouth and breeds there, in crannies that he can't get at. The plover feeds on this insect, and will go into a crocodile's mouth fearlessly after it. The crocodile seems to recognize instinctively that the bird is his friend. He lets it hop in and out of his mouth without molestation. The children would be much amused to see such a sight. We ought to get a crocodile plover by all means."

"Crocodile plover. Humph!" remarked a bystander in a pointed manner.

THE SAVING OF WILL

OLD Gen. Lawrence was the proudest man in all the commonwealth. Coming from a long line of distinguished ancestors, every generation of whom had stamped the impress of their personality upon the public life of their day, with direct progenitors who had figured as leaders in the Indian wars of the colonists, signers of the articles of confederation, and the declaration of independence, soldiers in the war of the revolution, 1812, and with Mexico, and distinguished statesmen in the halls of legislation and the councils of the nation; added to this a splendid record as an officer in the great war of the rebellion—all these things combined to give the old soldier a pride of family and self and a bearing which, while it may have been at times a trifle trying to the more democratic of his neighbors, was admitted by all to be to a great degree both natural and legitimate.

Hardly less proud and exclusive than the old general was his aristocratic wife, for the Lawrences had ever been mindful of their position in contracting matrimonial alliances and the bluest blood in the state had been passed to their children. The position of the Lawrences was freely acknowledged by their neighbors and the community took a kind of reflected pride in them.

Realizing all this the reader will imagine the shock it was to the old general and his good wife when his second son, Will, wrote him from Cuba that he was about to take unto himself as wife a dark-hued daughter of that island. It had been with the greatest satisfaction that the old general had seen Will start away in the uniform of a second lieutenant of volunteers at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war. Charles, the eldest son, was in Europe on a combined mission of business and health, both of which would have been seriously imperiled by his immediate return, and for some weeks the general had fumed himself nearly sick at the prospect of an American war in which one of his immediate family was not represented. He had been proud indeed when Will, only a lad of 20, had come to him and announced his determination to go to the front, together with the information that he had been elected a second lieutenant in a regiment or-general admitted its difficulty. He knew full well the iron determination of the Lawrences, and it had always been his boast that a "Lawrence has never been driven, sir—not a single step; you can kill them, but you can't drive them. No, siree."

So it happened one soft, languorous day that Charles Lawrence disembarked at Havana, presumably upon a mission to secure some transportation franchises for an American syndicate, and hunted up his brother, the captain.

He was received with open arms, and the brothers reveled for several days in their reunion. The elder never hinted at his mission, and when he "talked shop" at all, dwelt enthusiastically upon his franchise quest. If the younger suspected the ulterior design of his visitor he did not betray it.

It was several days after Charles appeared on the scene before he found any sort of opening for the furtherance of his real mission. Singularly enough Will did not mention his love affair or give him any sort of opening, and he hesitated to broach the subject himself. One soft evening, however, after dinner the captain remarked:

"Charley, I want you to make a call with me this evening. I will show you the two most beautiful women in Cuba—in the world."

Acquiescing readily, the two strolled through the better part of the town and brought up at a rather pretentiously built Cuban home of the older type—somewhat run down, but bearing marks of respectability, even aristocracy.

"This is the home of Don Carlos Antonio Silvera," remarked Will. "He is of a very old and very proud Spanish family—of the purest blood, mind you, and for heaven's sake don't forget that point, as he is extremely proud of it. He was formerly away up in G financially, but the revolution and other misfortunes have largely stripped him of his estates. But he keeps up appearances as best he can and is the finest kind of a type of an old aristocrat. And his two daughters are the very flower of the Antilles—especially Julia."

With this preface Charles was ushered into the house and presently was formally presented to the Senorita Julia. He was compelled to admit to himself that his brother certainly had an eye for beauty, for seldom in all his travels had he laid eyes on so striking a girl, so perfect a type of the Latin beauty. Still more was he surprised and taken aback at the high breeding and culture of the fair hostess and her chaperone, the old aunt who guarded her with lynx-eyed fidelity. He was presented also to the master of the house, and was fairly overawed by the dignity and grace of his manner. As he was regarding the senorita with profound admiration and reflecting upon the mammoth proportions his task had suddenly assumed, a curtain was swept aside and a vision appeared before him which drove all other thoughts from his mind and all other objects from his sight. It was another woman very like the Senorita Julia, but very different—more ripened and matured in charm and manner—one of those lustrous-eyed, olive-skinned, voluptuously formed creatures only to be found among the women descended from the pure Castilian blood, and also with a face so alive with intelligence and a head so perfectly formed that he almost forgot the perfection of physical beauty in admiration of the suggestion of intellectuality.

"Ah, this is the Senorita Rosa," exclaimed the captain. "Senorita, my brother, Charles."

The evening sped for both brothers, the younger being engrossed with his fiancée and the elder finding keen interest in the strange, ardent nature of the sister—absolutely a new type to him.

On the way to the captain's lodgings Charles became conscious of a feeling of distinct annoyance in the thought that he was not pursuing his mission with the single-heartedness that he should, and that he had enjoyed the evening altogether too much and did not regard the Silvera family with that aversion which was expected of him. Also he fancied that he detected a note of suppressed glee in the captain's demeanor.

There followed many visits to the Silvera home, and Charles put in many sleepless nights in trying to figure out a plan to break up the affair, but with a growing certainty that he was making a poor job of it and that he cared much more to bask in the sunlight of the Senorita Rosa's lustrous eyes than for expostulating with Will.

Of course the result was foreordained, and that was why old Gen. Lawrence one eventful day received a letter which all but caused the breaking of a blood-vessel and required all the skill of the family doctor to keep him from fading from earth in an apoplectic stroke. It was none other than the announcement that his two sons had been married, respectively, to the Senorita Rosa and the Senorita Julia and begging that he defer judgment until they arrived in America with their wives, when they were sure he would approve of their choice.

And the funniest feature of the entire affair is that he did.

THE KIDNAPPED MILLIONAIRES

A TALE OF WALL STREET AND THE TROPICS

By FREDERICK U. ADAMS.

CHAPTER XX—CONTINUED

"I second the motion," said Mr. Haven.

"All in favor say aye," said Mr. Rockwell.

Six men roared "aye!"

"Those opposed say no!"

"No! No!" shouted Simon Pence.

Vincent did not vote. Mr. Kent had nudged him to keep quiet.

"It is an outrageous rate, and I will never pay it!" said Mr. Pence.

"Why do you fix such an unheard-of rate?"

"The 'Jumping Jupiter' is a trust, and we need the money," said Mr. Kent.

"I am afraid those grinning idols will hoodoo us as it is. I move that we leave them behind, Mr. President. The best we can get is a lawsuit."

"I will pay the rate! I will pay it!" exclaimed Mr. Pence. "I was only joking."

"Draw up an agreement, Hammond, and have it properly signed and witnessed," said Mr. Rockwell.

Sidney did so, and Mr. Pence and Vincent signed it. Early the following morning the idols went on board "The Jumping Jupiter."

Tuesday morning broke fair and clear, with a steady but freshening southwest breeze. Never had the island looked lovelier than on the day set for the departure of the castaways. It seemed as if the feathered denizens of the tropical forests had surmised their plans, and had gathered to bid them Godspeed with a noisy chorus. Their brilliant plumage glistened in iridescent hues through the foliage around the bungalow. The chattering handlogs watched the preparations with curious interest. One very bold monkey ventured so near that Vincent, by a sudden rush, covered him with a large wicker basket. After much maneuvering he succeeded in clamping a chain over his neck and triumphantly led him captive to the deck of "The Jumping Jupiter."

"Here is our mascot!" he exclaimed, as he fastened the chain to the windlass. "He is ugly enough to stand off all the idols."

The monkey made a dash for Vincent's leg, but missed it by an inch. Vincent named him "Socks," on account of his white feet, and "Socks" was duly accepted as a mascot and a passenger.

There was a final survey of the bungalow to see if any necessary article had been overlooked. The windows were closed and barred and the keys deposited in the box under the tree where Hestor had found them. The big triangular sails were raised, the ropes cast off and "The Jumping Jupiter" slowly crawled away from the stone pier.

"We're off!" said Mr. Kent. "Good-by, Social Island! I have had a mighty good time, even if we were kidnapped."

"So have I," said Mr. Morton. "It has been a pleasant vacation, but an expensive one for me."

The monkey made frantic tugs at his chain, and set up a yell, which was responded to by hundreds of his brethren on shore.

"Keep quiet, you fool!" said Mr. Kent. "You will not be lonesome or homesick. You are going to New York."

But "Socks" was not to be consoled. He jabbered and fought until exhausted. Later in the day he became calmer, and seemed to be resigned to his fate.

By unanimous consent Sidney Hammond was made captain of "The Jumping Jupiter." He accepted the position and promised to discharge the duties to the best of his ability. He admitted an unfamiliarity with craft of "The Jumping Jupiter" class, but was confident that "he" would prove seaworthy. Once away from shore, they caught the benefit of tide and breeze, and swept out towards the gateway. Mr. Pence took one long look towards the rock where he had spent three awful hours. As they approached the outlet of "Morton's Bay" Sidney gave his first order. He glanced at the white breakers and shouted:

"Man the oars!"

Six of the men stood at the long sweeps. A critical moment was approaching. They were headed straight for the surf. Sidney saw that there was a heavy swell rolling in. He stood by the tiller and issued his instructions in a calm voice.

"When I give the word bend to your oars and row as hard as you can," he said. "There is not any danger, but we must help counteract the force of the surf. We shall make it readily enough. All ready? Row!"

The bow of "The Jumping Jupiter" rose slightly as the first incoming roller struck the raft. Mr. Pence was the only one not at work, and he looked at the foaming combers ahead with eyes lifted in terror. There was a strong breeze between the cliffs, and to Sidney's delight the boat was under good headway. The men pulled vigorously at the sweeps. The bow of "The Jumping Jupiter" sank in a way that was sickening to Simon Pence. The next moment a green wall of water fell with a crash. "Socks" gave a shriek which was smothered as the water rolled over him. The raft groaned from end to end. There was a sound of breaking glass.

"Row! Row hard!" shouted Sidney. For an instant the boat wallowed backwards. Then a strong gust of wind filled the sails and everyone bent to the oars. The next wave did not break.

"Once again!" shouted Sidney. There was a big wave coming. It towered overhead, but broke before it reached the boat. There was a snother of foam and a roar like that of Niagara, but "The Jumping Jupiter" was not to be stopped. In a few seconds they were past the danger line and out in deep water, where the swells rolled in regular lines broken only by ripples caused by the breeze. The oars were taken in and fastened to their places.

A cheer went up when they saw that immediate danger was past. Vincent went to the rescue of "Socks," who was dripping with water and chattering with fright, but entirely subdued.

"You are a mascot, all right, 'Socks,' old boy!" said Vincent, as he loosened the chain so that the monkey would not choke to death. "This beats climbing trees, doesn't it?"

Mr. Carmody and the others made an examination of the hull of the boat. The strain had caused a slight leak in the third compartment, but they had no difficulty in stopping it. The kitchen was somewhat disarranged and a number of dishes broken, but the damage was not serious. "The Jumping Jupiter" had successfully withstood its baptism and thus far had justified the hopes of the builders.

For half an hour Sidney held his course straight out to sea. Then he headed to the north. The big lateen sails were pulling splendidly, and though the craft responded slowly to the tiller, there was no trouble in holding her to the course. They now had a clear view of the coast.

"Where is the gateway?" asked Mr. Carmody, who had been looking intently along the shore for some time. "I cannot see it."

"I can see it," replied Sidney, "but I would never suspect it to be an inlet unless I knew it to be a fact. From any point at sea the rocks look solid and continuous. The gateway is just south of our flagstaff. Do you see it now?"

It was as Sidney said. The coast was so formed that no inlet showed. Half a mile from shore there was nothing to distinguish the entrance to the bay from a score of ragged indentations in the black cliffs. As they proceeded they came to the ridge of rocks which formed the north horn of the crescent. This they imagined to mark the north boundary of the island, but as they neared it they found it was but the south end of a bay which seemed to be 12 or 15 miles across.

"This is a pretty good-sized island, Hammond," remarked Mr. Kent, as this new panorama spread out before their view.

There was a puzzled expression on Sidney's face. As Mr. Kent spoke, the massive outlines of the snow-white peak, which had been seen from the island, slowly came into view above the hills along the coast. The land now opposite them was low and fairly flat. The big rock on their port side was seen to be the end of a spur of small mountains which came down to the ocean.

"I do not understand it," said Sidney. "There is no such island as this on any of our maps? Where can we be? This island is at least 40 miles long and perhaps longer. That must be the northern end of it."

Sidney pointed to the cape perhaps 15 miles away. It was now two o'clock in the afternoon, and Mr. Rockwell and Vincent announced that dinner was ready. They stretched an awning over the afterdeck and set a table beneath it. Sidney lashed the tiller in position and all proceeded to enjoy the repast. A haze was stealing over the ocean and the wind dying out. For a time "The Jumping Jupiter" had been making four or five miles an hour, but the breeze, as it came heavy with perfume from the shore died down until it was barely strong enough to straighten out the strined sails.

"Well, Capt. Hammond, what do you think of it?" asked Mr. Morton as he lit a cigar and leaned back in his chair.

"There is but one thing to do," said Sidney. "We must keep on this course until we round that cape. At this rate it will be dark before we make it. We will stand well out to sea, so as to have plenty of leeway in case of an east or northeast wind."

The big mountain peak was now almost exactly to the west of them.

"If that is old Popocatepetl, as I think it is," said Sidney, pointing at the huge purple mass, "Vera Cruz is only a little northwest of here. When it gets dark I will hold her north, and take no chances of running ashore on this island."

As the afternoon wore away, the haze settled and slowly blotted out the shore line. They crawled along at hardly two knots an hour. It was exasperating progress, but there was no help for it. In the evening the haze lifted and showed the cape still in the northwest. This proved that the tide was pulling against them. The wind died away to a breath, and the sun sank, a huge red ball of fire in a bank of orange clouds. At ten o'clock the wind swung into the southeast and freshened, but the haze yet hung over the sea, and Sidney held his course to the north.

All but Sidney and Mr. Kent retired to the bunks and slept soundly as if on an ocean liner. Save for the bank of fog, it was a perfect night on the water. The raft swayed gently to the deep breathing of the sea, and the masts groaned in musical cadence to the rippling of the water. At midnight Mr. Kent took the tiller, and Sidney stretched himself on a steamer chair and enjoyed two hours of untroubled slumber. He awoke and relieved Mr. Kent, who then took his nap.

Twice during the night Sidney turned the boat to the west, and held that course until the hollow thunder of the surf warned him to stand out. At about three o'clock the breeze quickened, and a 20-mile breeze sprang up, coming straight from the west. This compelled him to cease any more landward experiments, and "The Jumping Jupiter" rolled along at a five-mile-an-hour rate.

"It is satisfaction to know that we are going somewhere," said Sidney to himself. "We must be past the cape by this time. If the fog lifts with this breeze, daylight will show where we are."

As he spoke there was a faint glow in the eastern sky. Mr. Kent awoke with a yawn.

"Where are we at?" he asked. Sidney shook his head.

"We are headed north," he said.

"I DO NOT UNDERSTAND IT," SAID SIDNEY.

As the afternoon wore away, the haze settled and slowly blotted out the shore line. They crawled along at hardly two knots an hour. It was exasperating progress, but there was no help for it. In the evening the haze lifted and showed the cape still in the northwest. This proved that the tide was pulling against them. The wind died away to a breath, and the sun sank, a huge red ball of fire in a bank of orange clouds. At ten o'clock the wind swung into the southeast and freshened, but the haze yet hung over the sea, and Sidney held his course to the north.

All but Sidney and Mr. Kent retired to the bunks and slept soundly as if on an ocean liner. Save for the bank of fog, it was a perfect night on the water. The raft swayed gently to the deep breathing of the sea, and the masts groaned in musical cadence to the rippling of the water. At midnight Mr. Kent took the tiller, and Sidney stretched himself on a steamer chair and enjoyed two hours of untroubled slumber. He awoke and relieved Mr. Kent, who then took his nap.

Twice during the night Sidney turned the boat to the west, and held that course until the hollow thunder of the surf warned him to stand out. At about three o'clock the breeze quickened, and a 20-mile breeze sprang up, coming straight from the west. This compelled him to cease any more landward experiments, and "The Jumping Jupiter" rolled along at a five-mile-an-hour rate.

"It is satisfaction to know that we are going somewhere," said Sidney to himself. "We must be past the cape by this time. If the fog lifts with this breeze, daylight will show where we are."

As he spoke there was a faint glow in the eastern sky. Mr. Kent awoke with a yawn.

"Where are we at?" he asked. Sidney shook his head.

"We are headed north," he said.

"I DO NOT UNDERSTAND IT," SAID SIDNEY.

leak in the third compartment, but they had no difficulty in stopping it. The kitchen was somewhat disarranged and a number of dishes broken, but the damage was not serious. "The Jumping Jupiter" had successfully withstood its baptism and thus far had justified the hopes of the builders.

For half an hour Sidney held his course straight out to sea. Then he headed to the north. The big lateen sails were pulling splendidly, and though the craft responded slowly to the tiller, there was no trouble in holding her to the course. They now had a clear view of the coast.

"I can see it," replied Sidney, "but I would never suspect it to be an inlet unless I knew it to be a fact. From any point at sea the rocks look solid and continuous. The gateway is just south of our flagstaff. Do you see it now?"

It was as Sidney said. The coast was so formed that no inlet showed. Half a mile from shore there was nothing to distinguish the entrance to the bay from a score of ragged indentations in the black cliffs. As they proceeded they came to the ridge of rocks which formed the north horn of the crescent. This they imagined to mark the north boundary of the island, but as they neared it they found it was but the south end of a bay which seemed to be 12 or 15 miles across.

"This is a pretty good-sized island, Hammond," remarked Mr. Kent, as this new panorama spread out before their view.

There was a puzzled expression on Sidney's face. As Mr. Kent spoke, the massive outlines of the snow-white peak, which had been seen from the island, slowly came into view above the hills along the coast. The land now opposite them was low and fairly flat. The big rock on their port side was seen to be the end of a spur of small mountains which came down to the ocean.

"I do not understand it," said Sidney. "There is no such island as this on any of our maps? Where can we be? This island is at least 40 miles long and perhaps longer. That must be the northern end of it."

Sidney pointed to the cape perhaps 15 miles away. It was now two o'clock in the afternoon, and Mr. Rockwell and Vincent announced that dinner was ready. They stretched an awning over the afterdeck and set a table beneath it. Sidney lashed the tiller in position and all proceeded to enjoy the repast. A haze was stealing over the ocean and the wind dying out. For a time "The Jumping Jupiter" had been making four or five miles an hour, but the breeze, as it came heavy with perfume from the shore died down until it was barely strong enough to straighten out the strined sails.

"Well, Capt. Hammond, what do you think of it?" asked Mr. Morton as he lit a cigar and leaned back in his chair.

"There is but one thing to do," said Sidney. "We must keep on this course until we round that cape. At this rate it will be dark before we make it. We will stand well out to sea, so as to have plenty of leeway in case of an east or northeast wind."

The big mountain peak was now almost exactly to the west of them.

"If that is old Popocatepetl, as I think it is," said Sidney, pointing at the huge purple mass, "Vera Cruz is only a little northwest of here. When it gets dark I will hold her north, and take no chances of running ashore on this island."
